New facts have been discovered or more thoroughly investigated, and where the explanation was not at hand, and could not be found empirically, recourse to theories was rendered necessary. Of these theories some are entirely new, and therefore suggest new philosophical views of the mind; others are principally modifications of earlier theories, and adaptations to meet the needs of present science; others finally are distinct, yet not always conscious, survivals of theories of the past. In this revival of past theories, it sometimes occurs that the essential, the fundamental basis of the theory is discarded, while that which is secondary or less essential is preserved; and thus the attempt is made to incorporate certain elements of an older theory in the new....
