Doubtless he wished to see me established in the same faith; nor was he disappointed in his pious desires. Whilst the grace of God was thus from year to year growing with my growth, the time arrived for me to devote myself more zealously to study. I had hitherto received instruction from private tutors; now, however, that I had reached my eleventh year, I was placed in the public school. Here I was in danger of losing all simplicity of character. There were many boys, already masters in wickedness, though not older than myself; and being much too weak in the faith to withstand their temptations, I was beginning to learn their ways. My father saw this, without seeing the means to obviate it. In his distress, he prayed incessantly, as he has since often told me, that God would be pleased to establish me in His ways. His prayer was heard. The work of grace in my soul was renewed, and again I followed the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. In 1726, I remember experiencing a strong renewal of spirit. It was on a Sunday evening: my father had read a sermon to me, and perceiving that my heart was awake, he spoke at some length of justification from all sin by the faith which is in Christ, and then kneeling down with me, he prayed. I was much affected, and from that time a...
